Another Vessel Torpedoed Off Atlantic Coast

Ship That Was Reported
Attacked, However,
Reaches Port Safely.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—

The Navy announced the fifteenth enemy submarine attack on Atlantic coastal shipping today, but this report was balanced by a disclosure that another vessel reported set upon by an undersea raider several days ago had not actually been attacked, and had made port safely.

Latest craft to be torpedoed was the 6,836-ton tanker Rochester, owned by the Secony-Vacuum Oil Company of New York City. Within five minutes after being hit, the tanker was abandoned, presumably being given up for lost. Survivors were rescued by unidentified craft and tonight were en route to Norfolk, Va.

If sunk, as was indicated, the torpedoed Rochester would raise to 14 the total of ships reported destroyed by submarines, with a toll in dead and missing of more than 350 persons. The raiders have struck down these vessels in a three-week period in operations extending from Florida to Nova Scotia, and only two of the ships reported attacked have escaped destruction.

The attack on the Rochester was announced a short time after release of a Navy statement saying that the 7,236-ton tanker Pan Maine of New York, owned by the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport Company, had "reached an Atlantic port safely."

The Pan Maine was reported torpedoed last Tuesday. However, Naval authorities at Boston disclosed tonight that the vessel had arrived safely.

Included on the Pan Maine's crew list were Allie Meadows, wiper, of Lyons, Ga., and Ceylon Durant, second cook, of Athens, Georgia.

Battered Defenders Brace Themselves For New Assaults

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—General Douglas MacArthur reported to the War Department today that he had simply ignored a Japanese demand for his surrender and said his Filipino troops had only laughed at Jap appeals that they lay down their arms.

His message was transmitted while his battered but determined defending forces braced themselves to repel another in the long series of full scale enemy onslaughts. While the invaders prepared to resume the offensive there was a lull in the fighting.

The demand for capitulation said the general, was printed on leaflets dropped by Japanese aviators as early as January 10. More recently, he added, the Japs had resumed dropping the pamphlets, this time with a message for the Filipino soldiers printed on the reverse side.

The appeal, expressing a desire to "avoid further annihilation of your dear lives," was filled with typically amusing Japanese school-boy examples of mutilated English.

"This message," MacArthur said, "has occasioned much mirth among the Filipino soldiers who are continuing their resistance with loyalty, courage and resolution," he said.

The original leaflet of January 10 was addressed to General MacArthur, and read:

"You are well aware that you are doomed. The end is near. The question is how long you will be able to resist. You have already cut rations by half. I appreciate the fighting spirit of yourself and your troops who have been fighting with courage. Your prestige and honor have been upheld.

"However, in order to avoid needless bloodshed and to save your First, Thirty-first divisions, and the remnants of other divisions, together with your auxiliary troops, you are advised to surrender. In the meantime, we shall continue our offensive as I do not wish to give you time for defense. "If you desire to comply with our advice, send a mission as soon as possible to our front line. We shall then cease firing and negotiate an armistice. Failing that, our offense will be continued with inexorable force, which will bring upon you only disaster.

"Hoping your wise counsel will so prevail that you will save the lives of your troops, I remain, "Yours very sincerely, "Commander in Chief, the Japanese Expeditionary Forces."

The message printed on the back, to the Filipino troops, read as follows:

"The outcome of the present combat has been already decided and you are cornered to the doom. At this time, ever generous commander-in-chief of Japanese expeditionary forces in order to avoid further annihilation of your dear lives has presented to your commander in chief, General MacArthur, a letter as shown on the back page of this leaflet. But, however, being unable to realize the present situation, blinded General MacArthur has stupidly refused our proposal and continues futile struggle at the cost of your precious lives.

"Dear Filipino soldiers, there are still one way left for you. That is to give up all your weapons at once and surrender to the Japanese forces before it is too late, then we shall fully protect you. We repeat the last. Surrender at once and build your Philippines for and by Filipinos.

"Commander in Chief of the Japanese Expeditionary Forces." Making these communications public, the War Department also announced that 230 of the 428 injured in the December 7 attack on Pearl Harbor had recovered from their wounds and returned to duty.

F.D.R. Predicts Final Victory in Birthday Talk

President, 60, Is Flooded
With Greetings on Anniversary.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—President Roosevelt told thousands celebrating his 60th birthday anniversary tonight the fact America could look after the health of its people while engaged in the grim business of war meant the United States definitely expected to win through to a sound peace.

Speaking by radio from the White House to about 12,000 parties held throughout the country to raise funds for combatting infantile paralysis, the President said he had been authorized by the trustees of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis to make a special announcement—that county chapters may use part of this year's funds to give special assistance to the children of soldiers, sailors and marines who may fall victim to the disease.

"That will be good news," he said, "and a well deserved boon to the fathers who are serving their flag on land and on sea in many parts of the world, and to the mothers who have been left at home to do their brave part—to carry on."

Mr. Roosevelt delivered his "Thank you" for general donations to the drive after an intimate birthday dinner with a group of close friends at the White House.

He had been made additionally happy, he said, by the fact parties and celebrations were being held not only in this country but in many sister American republics.

For the President, the address climaxed a day of hard work on war duties amid a constant stream of arriving greetings from crown-

Last Reserves in Singapore Prepare for Battle

Enemy Army Only 18 Miles From Bastion

Heavy Installment on Bill of Attrition Paid
by Japanese.

By ASSOCIATED PRESS.

The Japanese enemy was reaching out for Singapore's throat at Johore strait last night, but at the hour of his advance a brief stock-taking of the general Pacific struggle showed a heavy installment already paid upon that long bill of attrition with which the Allies intend to bankrupt his arms and drive him down upon his insignificant islands in the end.

The invader's troops stood within 18 miles of the strait—a last mile of water before Singapore itself—on the central Malayan front, and within 20 miles of that straight in western Malaya, and in the center area he was astride a first-class highway that must lead him soon to the last field of decision for the greatest British base in the orient.

Singapore was under military cordon; its approaches were under violent bombing attack; its defenders were overwhelmingly outnumbered by an invading force estimated at six full divisions, or 100,000 men. The last reserve British forces were being prepared for action.

But of the larger theater, recaptulations in Washington and

Cooking School Here Keyed to War Pace

Keying the cooking school to defense tempo to better fit Atlanta homemakers for their role in wartime preparedness, officials planning The Constitution cooking school last night announced well-rounded program of instruction and entertainment to begin Tuesday morning.

Starting with the opening of the doors of the Roxy theater at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday morning, the school program will provide the homemakers of Atlanta and neighboring communities with instruction in nutrition, fashion hints, helps on interior decoration and will send them home armed with valuable prizes, contributed by local and national merchants.

Valuable Contributions.
At the top of the list of prizes announced by local merchants are a gas range, given by Davison-Paxon, and an electric ironer, given by King Hardware Company. Other prizes include shoes by Thompson-Boland-Lee, cleaning tickets by Briarcliff Laundry, valuable pieces of silver by Schneider & Sons, a radio by Barnes Electric Company, tickets good for chicken dinners at Pig'n Whistle and Peacock Alley, and 25 food baskets each day.

Myers-Dickson Furniture Company will present Miss Sue Sulsten, widely known home styling expert and columnist, to give a 15-minute talk each day on interior decoration.

Fashion Parade.
Mrs. Edna Lee, of Regenstein's, is arranging a colorful fashion parade to start the cooking school each day. Four entirely different parades of fashion will be offered to exhibit the latest styles.

Cooking instruction, to be given by the nationally known nutrition expert, Mrs. Mabel B. Bowen, will not begin until 9 o'clock, but Mrs. Willard Patterson, director of courses for the Woman's Voluntary Service, announced yesterday that AWWV volunteers attending the course for credit would be required to be in the building, registered and in their seats by the time Mrs. Bowen's lecture begins.

Traffic Deaths Hit All-Time Peak in 1941

Defense Speedup Blamed for Increase to 40,000 Total.

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—(P)—America smashed into an all-time high in traffic deaths in 1941.

A total of 40,000 persons perished in accidental deaths from this one cause alone, the National Safety Council said in a report, which attributed the increase over 1940, in large measure, to the nation's mighty defense effort.

The traffic toll figured on the basis of population, was 16 per cent above the 1940 figure of 34,501 and 357 above the previous high of 39,643 in 1937.

Accidental deaths from all causes totaled 45,500—the third highest on record. The figure represented a 5 per cent jump over the total of 43,885 in 1940, and compared with 110,052 in 1936 and 105,205 in 1937.

Among the dead were about 18,000 workers killed in occupational accidents and 29,000 killed in off-the-job mishaps. Accidental deaths in the homes dropped 3 per cent from 35,000 to 32,000, and public fatalities, not including traffic, fell 3 per cent from 15,000 to 14,500.

"The increase," said the council, "was due entirely to traffic and occupational accidents."

Ex-President Arturo Alessandri, speaking on behalf of Rios, charged that as president from 1927 to 1931 General Ibanez maintained a dictatorship. He expressed faith that Rios would correct the "errors" of the popular front administration headed by the late Pedro Aguirre Cerda.

BERLIN (From German Broadcasts), Jan. 30.—(P)—An official announcement today said 2,140,000 alien men and women had been put to work in Germany in addition to 1,500,000 "prisoners of war."

Hitler Admits End of War Not in Sight

Says Jap Attack on U. S.
Greatly Relieves His Situation.

BERLIN (From German Broadcasts) Jan. 30.—(P)—Adolf Hitler acknowledged to his people today that he could not promise an end to the war this year but declared Japan's surprise attack upon the United States "has greatly relieved our situation."

Speaking for the first time since his declaration of war upon the United States, Hitler blamed the weather instead of the Russians for Nazi reverses on the eastern front and promised 1942 "will again be a year of great victories."

"Countries which have nothing now are united," he said. "We shall see who wins this war—those who have nothing to lose and everything to win or those who have everything to lose and nothing to gain."

"I do not know if the war will end this year, but one thing I do know: wherever the enemy will come up against us he will be beaten!"

$6,016,300,000 More Added To Navy Bill

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(P)—The record-smashing Navy appropriations bill jumped to a grand total of $26,494,265,474 today when a senate subcommittee swiftly approved a $6,016,300,000 increase asked by President Roosevelt and then added $500,000,000 extra.

Of the huge increase, $5,000,000,000 was for the Naval Air Force, Senator Overton, Democrat, Louisiana, chairman of the subcommittee, said:

"This should assure us supremacy in the air as well as on the seas. They have asked us not to disclose the exact number of new planes this will mean, although I guess even a Jap could figure that out."

In addition to the Presidential estimates, Overton said the subcommittee inserted a $500,000,000 "lump sum" for Secretary of the Navy Knox to be used for supply reservoirs wherever they might be needed by the Navy.

The group also inserted a new "lease-lend" provision which Overton said granted the President authority to "lease any ships in our Navy to Allied nations" and also turn over to them up to $2,000,000,000 worth of other defense articles covered by the bill. This authority applies to airplanes as well as other articles.

When the bill recently passed

Roosevelt Puts Signature on Price Measure

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(P)—President Roosevelt signed the price control bill today, but warned that its provisions on agricultural prices were inadequate to prevent an inflationary increase in living costs.

"Nothing could better serve the purposes of our enemies than that we should become the victims of inflation," the chief executive said in a formal statement which also asserted that the enactment of the bill did not mean that "the battle against inflation has been won."

In view of the half-year of congressional controversy that preceded its passage, Mr. Roosevelt felt it was the best bill that could be had, and therefore affixed his signature.

The bill gives Leon Henderson, the price administrator, authority to fix maximum rents and maximum prices for a long list of commodities and articles used by civilians or needed for the war effort.

Exceptions are provided for farm and fishery prices. No maximum could be fixed for the former short of 110 per cent of parity.

The secretary of agriculture is, moreover, given a veto power over any maxima fixed for farm prices.

Huge German Forces Periled By Red Traps

Moth-Like Soviet Planes
Brave Gales To Scout
Fleeing Nazis.

By EDDY GILMORE.

MOSCOW, Jan. 30.—(P)—In firm possession of the railway gate to the Ukraine granary and the Donets coal basin, the Red army was reported officially tonight to have outflanked, out-knifed and encircled the German enemy in scores of sectors on a master Stalin plan of throwing the Germans from every acre of Russian soil in 1942.

Huge German forces were in danger of entrapment in the center, north and south of the active front. Prong-like Soviet drives were aimed at many objectives, catching the Nazis between the forks and leaving them the choice of being destroyed, captured or retreating with such speed that they lose much valued equipment.

In trying to pursue the latter course, the Germans met swift charges behind their lines by skilled Siberian ski troops which interrupted the best-laid Nazi plans.

The new Red army offensives are based on a considerable element of surprise aided by deft

Another Site May Be Picked For Plane Plant

Army Board Here To Study All Proposed Locations.

Possibility that the Army Air Corps may choose a site other than the new Marietta airport for the location of the proposed $15,000,000 Bell Aircraft Corporation bomber assembly plant was indicated yesterday upon the arrival of an Army board from Washington to make a study of all sites in the area available for the plant.

Major Daniel E. Ellis, Captain George C. Updegraff, and Second Lieutenant Harold B. Neely flew here from Washington to confer with Lieutenant Colonel R. E. York, Army district engineer, and with him to make an inspection tour of all the sites that have been proposed for the huge plant.

"We intend to study all the data that have been submitted on the various proposed sites and to visit each site," said Colonel York. "Then we will prepare a report upon our recommendation."

Because the Naval Reserve Aviation Base at Chamblee is in need of additional air fields for cadet training, Commander D. Ward Harrigan had asked for the Marietta port, too. The Navy demand was withdrawn last week after Army officials in Washington declared the Army needed the Marietta site. Harrigan said yesterday there had been no change from this status so far as he was concerned.

Proposed sites for the bomber plant, which is to employ 40,000 workers, are located at Ellenwood, Simpson and Hightower roads, Fairburn and Tucker, in addition to the one at Marietta. Several additional sites for the big plant also may be inspected by the Army board.

Atlanta's Polio Dances Attract Large Crowds

Callaway Confident State Attained Full Quota In Campaign.

They danced last night. They danced throughout Atlanta, Georgia and the United States as the nation celebrated the President's birthday, and to raise funds for the fight against infantile paralysis.

Atlanta's thronged to the Municipal auditorium, where they danced to the strains of Perry Bechtel's orchestra; to the Ansley hotel, where Curley Hicks' band furnished the music; the Henry Grady hotel, where Nu Nu Chastain and his orchestra were the attractions; at the Capital City Club, with Jimmy Vincent's band; at the Biltmore hotel, where Harry Hearne furnished the music; at the Piedmont Driving Club, with Bill Manley's orchestra, and at the Standard Club, with Hal Mayfield's orchestra.

Many Service Men.
Soldiers and sailors mixed with the crowd in all places, and the men in uniform, the only persons admitted free, were not without partners, as the girls were always willing to leave their escorts and dance a number with the service men.

Jimmy Kilpatrick and his Variety Stars were kept busy going from one ballroom to another. The ball at the auditorium opened promptly at 9 o'clock with numbers by Kilpatrick, who also acted as master of ceremonies, by Betty Blue, Marion Reinhardt and the four Dancing Co-eds.

Then they went to the hotels and clubs, singing and dancing until their voices were husky and their dancing feet ached.

Belle Isle Happy.
The merry throng of dancers also went from one ball to another, as one ticket admitted to any of the dances.

A. L. Belle Isle, Atlanta and Fulton county chairman of the birthday celebration, beamed with pleasure as he looked over the crowds and predicted Atlanta had raised its pro rata portion of the state quota of $97,000 which will be used in the nation-wide fight against polio.

Cason Callaway, chairman of the Georgia committee for the celebration of the President's 60th birthday, expressed confidence Georgia had raised its quota for the infantile paralysis fund.

Roosevelt Predicts Eventual Victory

ed heads and just plain people, from the far corners of the earth and from American cities and hamlets. One message was a salute from General Douglas MacArthur and his men in the "fox holes" of Bataan.

The President found great significance in the fact that this year's campaign for funds to help crippled children had been carried out despite the world conflict.

Human Ideals.
"Even in time of war those nations which still hold to the old ideals of christianity and democracy, are carrying on services to humanity which have little or no relationship to torpedoes or guns or bombs," he said.

"That means very definitely that we have an abiding faith in the future—a definite expectancy that we are going to win through to a peace which will bring with it continuing progress and substantial success in our efforts for the security and not for the destruction of humanity."

Under the enemy's kind of government, he said, there was no time for ideals, decency, nor interest in the weak and afflicted to whom in this country the President's birthday was dedicated.

There could be no doubt that this anniversary was one destined to occupy an especial place in Mr. Roosevelt's memories.

For years the American people have made the chief executive's birthday anniversary an occasion for celebration and for raising funds with which to fight infantile paralysis.

But this time it was different—the nation at war, and millions outside this country placing their hope and faith for the future on this man who at 60 has shouldered breath-taking burdens and responsibilities.

There had been countless greetings before, but never such a one as that from General Douglas MacArthur and the resolute men of his army, braced in the far-off Philippines against overwhelming enemy odds.

"Today, January 30, the anniversary of your birth," MacArthur messaged, "smoke-begrimed battle, rise from the fox holes of Bataan and the batteries of Corregidor to pray reverently that Goy may bless immeasurably the President of the United States."

Mr. Roosevelt's forenoon was just another working day in the executive offices, but at luncheon time he went to the White House to greet a group of movie, stage and radio stars here to attend the capital's various birthday balls.

Betty Grable, Judy Canova, Rosalind Russell, Bonita Granville, Brenda Marshall, Mickey Rooney and his bride, Ava Gardner, and Edward Arnold and a host of others were present, but the star was Gerry King.

Gerry, 4 years old, is a bright-faced New York youngster just recovering from the effects of infantile paralysis. It was to raise funds to make youngsters like him whole again that 12,000 birthday parties were held in various parts of the country tonight.

Gift for F. D. R.
Gerry, stumping into the executive mansion on crutches, brought Mr. Roosevelt a model of an airplane carrier as a birthday present.

After the luncheon it was back to work for the President. At the capitol, meantime, members of the house were turning their session into one of tribute to him. Democratic Leader McCormack called him "one of the great men of all times." From the Republican side, Representative Canfield, of New Jersey, said all America wished him well, and Representative Jenkins, of Ohio, declared "we must march solidly, honestly and fearlessly" behind him.

Similar tributes had been delivered yesterday in the senate, which had no session scheduled today.

24 Dinner Guests.
To the dinner tonight the President and Mrs. Roosevelt invited 24 guests. They included the Crown Prince and Princess of Norway, Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Morgenthau, the President's White House aides and secretarial staff, his former New York law partner, Basil O'Connor, Harry Hopkins, and a group including Kirke L. Simpson, of the Associated Press, who traveled with Mr. Roosevelt when he was an unsuccessful candidate in 1920 for vice president. The latter group is known familiarly as the "Cuff Links Gang" because in 1920 Mr. Roosevelt gave them all cuff links bearing his and their initials.

Meanwhile, in the house Representative Doughton, Democrat, North Carolina, said Mr. Roosevelt has shown in the present crisis the "same wisdom, courage and spirit which has endeared him to the American people and never, in my opinion, have we had a more powerful leader."

Representative Cox, Democrat, Georgia, said that "We all pledge our devotion, confidence, loyalty and best service," and added: "Fate has said to him: 'I find thee worthy. Do this thing for me.'"

Great Humanitarian.
Representative Starnes, Democrat, Alabama, characterizing Mr. Roosevelt as a "great humanitarian," said that "out of his physical suffering has come a compassion for the weak and suffering."

Although 60 today, Mr. Roosevelt in some respects doesn't act it. At a time of life when many men of his means would have turned to a comfortable retirement, he is working harder than ever.

His personal physician, Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, says that the chief executive is in fine physical and mental fettle for a man of 60. Aside from the deepening of his lines in his face, and the graying and thinning of his hair, almost nine years in the White House have touched him relatively lightly.

British Unity

By vote of 464 to 1, the British house of commons expressed its continued trust in the leadership of Prime Minister Winston Churchill. The one contrary individual, by the way, is one James Maxton, member of a so-called Independent Labor Party, whose sole purpose in parliament seems to be to prove the others are right, by shouting "every other one is out of step but me."

There has never been a better demonstration of the vital strength of a working democracy than the way Britain has stood with Churchill through all the ups and downs—mostly downs—of this war and the way in which Churchill has told his people, with utmost frankness, the changing world situations.

Churchill has never hesitated to make public bad news. He has calmly and quietly admitted mistakes. He has said, in effect, "our judgment was bad, we are paying for that error. But it was an error of judgment, not of intent. If you prefer some other to lead you, say so. But if you still stand with me, then say that, too."

And they have said it, overwhelmingly. Public discussion is very much alive in England today. There is all freedom of speech and freedom of press on matters of leadership and policy. Individuals may grouse and newspapers may criticize.

Through it all the British people stand firmly behind their leader, Churchill, and, by vote 464 to 1, reveal to the world a unity that makes sure the ultimate victory.

In the face of bad news and days of worry and alarm, they say, in effect, just what an American general, Grant, said during the War Between the States:—"We'll fight it out this way if it takes all summer." Or if it takes ten years.

Program of Community Value

It is doubtful if there is any organization in Atlanta and Fulton county which has rendered, and is rendering, service of greater value to the community as a whole than the Atlanta League of Women Voters.

Membership in this league is composed of the most intelligent and sincere women of the community. They have devoted themselves to painstaking study of the governmental and administrative problems of the city and section, they have suggested and brought about many highly desirable reforms and, always, they have conducted their affairs on strictly non-partisan basis, free of the contaminating touch of factional politics.

The annual meeting of the League was held this week. At that time eight program items adopted for 1941 were listed as accomplished. They included the establishment of a social disease hospital for Atlanta; election at large for members of the city board of education; abolition of the board of registrars and centralization of this duty in the tax collector's office; registration on duplicate cards, with one set to be used at the polls; complete new registration in 1941 to start a new system; purging of voters' list, after due notice, of all who have not voted over a two-year period; the secret ballot for Fulton county, and ban on early primaries for Fulton county, that is, before September 1.

Six new items to be achieved were adopted in the 1942 program. They include a safe and reasonably priced milk supply; separation of city school finances from general city finances; strict enforcement and extension of the new registration system; a joint planning authority for the metropolitan area; a study of "consumer interests," and a study of "simplification of county financial reports and statements."

The league does not adopt any project until after serious study. Thus, when it officially advocates any change in system or procedure, it does so with full and sincere belief it is for the advantage of the greater number of citizens. Thus the zeal inspired by full belief in the justice and righteousness of the cause invariably gives strength and inspiration to league undertakings.

As a fact-finding body and as an advocate of better ways of life for Atlanta, the league performs extremely valuable service. It is to be hoped that, in times of war as in times of peace, there will be no slackening of its endeavors.

Syphilis in Atlanta

The report of the anti-syphilis committee of the Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce, under the chairmanship of Dr. William Dobes, reveals conditions so deplorable it should not only awaken the people of this city, but should challenge them to do something about it and do that something quickly.

The report of the United States Public Health Service, based upon blood tests of the first million selectees and volunteers for the Army, shows Georgia stands fourth in the list of states in the number of syphilis cases in ratio to population. Only Florida, South Carolina and Mississippi—in that order—show worse records.

Worse than this, among cities of 250,000 or more population, Atlanta has the worst record of all, with 162.5 cases of syphilis for each 1,000 men examined.

Health laws of Georgia provide ample legal machinery for the proper treatment of all infected persons. The trouble is those health laws are not enforced, or the community does not provide sufficient funds and sufficient personnel to administer the proper treatment and for the handling of the general problem.

Atlanta has one small venereal clinic, that is all. It is a small building, with space, facilities and personnel for caring for, at most, 1,000 patients. Two physicians and two nurses, which is the regular staff on duty, are utterly unable to pay individual attention to any of the hundreds of patients lined up for treatment. There is no one to check individual charts to see that proper treatment is administered.

In addition, however, hundreds of cases do not report regularly for treatment and hundreds of others never report at all.

Undoubtedly thousands of cases of families on relief are due, primarily, to disability of the wage earner because of syphilis infection. Proper control of this plague would save many times over all the cost involved, in reduction of the public relief burden and in fewer patients for our charity clinics, hospitals and institutions for the insane. Likewise there would be far fewer convicted criminals to be kept at the expense of city, county and state.

Syphilis is a disease that takes many forms. It is known, today, that infection may be through many means. The majority of cases are spread by prostitutes, but there are great numbers which are acquired by its victims in entirely innocent manner.

Scores of physical ailments are directly caused by the syphilis germ, including heart ailments, kidney ailments, paralysis, blindness, insanity, etc.

The United States Public Health Service, backed by funds of the R. J. Reynolds Foundation, has achieved such remarkable results in stamping out syphilis in Glynn county, Georgia, that national recognition has been accorded that Georgia county.

It is all the more shameful that Georgia, and Atlanta, should stand so low in this infection, with a Georgia county as a good example in the eradication of the disease.

The example set by some communities in America and by some countries of Europe proves that syphilis can be stamped out, as plagues of the past have been eradicated.

But only by generous use of money, by strict enforcement of health laws and by hard work by officials and clinic personnel, can the disease be defeated.

It is time Atlanta woke up to this menace in her midst and the report of the Jaycee committee could well be the means of that awakening.

Georgia Editors Say:

BALANCE WHEEL

(From The American Times-Recorder)
The pinch of priorities is really beginning to be felt. And it is being felt by the individual consumer, no less than by businesses which are no longer able to obtain adequate quantities of materials which were once abundant.

As the defense effort gains momentum and production soars upward, the consumer's problems will become more severe. He may not be able to walk into a store and purchase precisely what he wants. Other articles he is used to may become excessively costly.

That, however, should not be cause for worry and despair. There are plenty of inexpensive substitutes for practically everything that is becoming scarce or expensive. And there is where the need for consumer education comes in. The best way to educate and inform the consumer is through the columns of his daily newspaper. Successful manufacturers and retailers discovered that fact a long time ago.

WASHINGTON PARADE

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS

PAUL BROWN AND FARMERS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—To Representative Paul Brown, of Georgia, should go the major credit for an added measure of the great prosperity in sight for American agriculture in 1942—particularly southern cotton farmers, whose dream of parity is about to be realized.

It was the Elberton congressman who sponsored the Brown amendment to the price control legislation finally enacted this week, under which farm prices cannot be fixed below the average market price prevailing during the period from July 1, 1919, to June 30, 1929. This means that the floor for cotton is 21.6 cents per pound. No figure below that can be set by the price control administration.

Already cotton is on the verge of attaining this long-sought parity figure. Before the price control legislation was first passed by the lower house last fall, the staple was bringing around 17 cents. Under the stimulus of the Brown amendment and war conditions, it has risen to better than 20 cents. It can still go to 21.6 before price control measures are applied at that floor.

RUSSELL LED SENATE FIGHT After a bitterly contested passage in the house, another Georgian, Senator Richard B. Russell, championed the amendment in the upper chamber and succeeded in having it preserved in the final legislation adopted. Both were equally active in insisting that cotton, the south's chief agricultural product, was entitled to go this high before any price is fixed. Other members outside of the farming areas would have placed a flooring much lower.

In hitting upon the 1919-1929 base period as a new yardstick for cotton parity, Representative Brown, during hearings on the bill before the House Banking Committee, interrogated many witnesses to show that the average prices for those years were reasonable and not inflationary.

The base period formerly used in determining parity—1909-1914—the cost aside as too remote as conditions and prices have changed materially since then. He described the old period as the horse-and-buggy era, pointing out that in those days we had few cars, trucks, farm machinery, or other modern high-priced farm equipment.

BETTER BASE The 1919-1929 period offers a better base, it was argued, because during these years the cost of such commodities as food, fuel, hides and leather, metal products, building materials, chemicals and house furnishings, were more on a common relationship with each other.

If the new yardstick had the effect of giving most farm products a potential 110 per cent of parity, the average of farm prices from 1910 to 1940 was only 87 per cent of parity, the Georgia congressman reminded, adding that it would take a parity of 110 for 40 years to make up for this past loss of prices below parity.

Congress was sufficiently impressed with the argument to retain the Brown amendment, despite the determined opposition that was raised in some quarters.

FARM PRICES TO RISE As for the general agricultural outlook, farm prices in 1942 are expected by government economists to reach the highest levels in more than a decade, although record production of most commodities is anticipated. Fears are expressed that they will go too high under the stimulus of war demands and war spending—thus the ceilings of 110 per cent of parity set in the price control bill.

The average farm prices in 1941 were slightly below parity, but estimates have been made by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics indicating that the present year farm income will exceed that of last year by 25 per cent.

Greater consequent prosperity for agriculture is promised on the basis that the increase in farm income is expected to outweigh the 15 per cent rise in prices which officials estimate farmers will have to pay for supplies. The margin in favor of the farmers will be greater than it has been in years, and more than sufficient to bring farm income up to parity.

ROSY PICTURE From grain men have come estimates that the 110 parity will allow wheat to bring $1.57 a bushel—higher than it has been since 1929. At current quotations it is already bringing about $1.30. Corn could go to $1.12 a bushel; oats to 70 cents. Livestock would be held close to present levels; but other products in the farm category will be permitted a boost. Add 21.6-cent cotton to this, and the picture for the farmers is rosy.

The Press And The War.

Gerald Johnson, editorial writer of the Baltimore Sun and biographer of President Roosevelt, has an article in the February issue of the Atlantic Monthly which is of surpassing interest to all newspapermen.

It is a study of the newspaper in a world at war, including our own participation. Mr. Johnson, in concluding his article, sums up in the following paragraph: "Being an American newspaperman in the months immediately ahead is going to be more difficult than ever before in this generation, but it is also going to be more interesting; and in the end, I have faith to believe, the coming epoch will reflect credit on the craft."

Responsibility And Duty. Discussing first the difficulties of arriving at a proper evaluation of the news when reporters in practically every country in the world are working under the handicap of censorship, not only of what they write but of the information they receive, Mr. Johnson points out how there is, in addition to the responsibility of full co-operation with the censorship on news which might be of value to the enemy, the responsibility of exposing certain weaknesses in our own war program, which, war or no war, censorship or not, has not been lifted from newspapers.

Speaking of the adjustment necessary when newspapers work under censorship, Mr. Johnson says: "In this endeavor much will depend upon the censorship. It began very well. The appointment of Mr. Byron Price as director was approved by the press, for he is admittedly one of the ablest newspapermen in the country. But Mr. Price, after all, is not the final authority. There are powers behind him, and it is conceivable that these may force him sometimes to follow courses that his own judgment does not altogether approve.

"The cheaper sort of politicians—including politicians in the armed forces—will certainly exhaust every resource their ingenuity can suggest to employ the censorship, not to keep the enemy ignorant of our military dispositions, but to keep the country ignorant of the stupidities and worse perpetrated by incompetent or dishonest officials. Sometimes they will succeed. We may as well face that depressing fact in the beginning. No war was ever fought, and doubtless none ever will be fought, without the enrichment of some rascals, the sanctification of some villains, and the laudation of some fools. The restriction of these melancholy incidents to the irreducible minimum should be the limit of our hopes; and that limit is likely to be approached in such measure as the censorship is prevented from becoming the protection of the brainless and the conscienceless.

Will Not Fail In the Large. "... the idea that the American press will be in constant collision with the censorship is fantastic. ... While it is practically certain that there will be an occasional slip, we may feel confident that the press will not fail to assume its full responsibility as regards the publication of news that may be of military value to the enemy. The serious question concerns its assumption of responsibility for its other function, that of keeping the American people informed, not as to military dispositions, but as to the honesty, intelligence, and efficiency of their government. Efforts will be made to employ the censorship for preventing the discharge of that function. Efforts will be made to employ to the same end political pressure, economic pressure, patriotic fervor, and the unfamiliarity of the situation.

"The defeat of these efforts will demand the exercise of skill in a high degree, energy, courage, and, above all, cool, balanced judgment. To assert that the press will always measure up to standards so high would be little short of imbecility. There must be failures. The job is simply too difficult for humanity to do it perfectly. But the failures in detail will not add up to failure in the large. By degrees the press will adjust itself; slipping here, and sliding there, it will nevertheless keep its footing in the main and thread its way through this unfamiliar labyrinth at a pace that will improve with the passage of time."

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today. From the news columns of Wednesday, January 31, 1917: "QUERETARO, Mexico, January 20.—The constitutional assembly today passed article 33 of the constitution, which provides that the President of the republic may expel without prior trial foreigners whose presence in the republic is considered troublesome."

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

What WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Communists? No, they're not Communists.

They are—

Well, take, for example, an economic genius named Harold Loeb, who is identified by the Dies committee as a "senior business specialist" on the staff of Leon Henderson, the price administrator, who has just been authorized to ration all goods sold at retail.

Mr. Loeb and Mr. Henderson were interested in technocracy some years ago and Mr. Loeb wrote a book about technocracy in which he said: "Our case would be hopeless if the profit system could be made to work." Mr. Henderson was a member of the technocracy committee, one of whose early statements said that if technocracy were adopted "all social, political and economic theories of the present must be thrown away," but a little over a year later he resigned from the committee, rejecting technocracy. Mr. Loeb's book, however, was published two years after that, in 1935, and in 1936, he wrote another called "Production For Use." He is not a businessman, by trade, of course. He does it by ear.

Other Books Mr. Loeb is quite an author. His other works include one called "Dodo and Bodo," dedicated to "Kitty," published in 1925; "Tumbling Mustard," dedicated to "Poke," published in 1929, and "Professors Like Vodka," one of those roguish Parisian things, which came out in 1927 and was dedicated to—you'd never guess.

This tasty little tale, so revealing of the man who is now, above all available American believers in the American system, selected as a "senior business specialist" for price administration in a nation at war, was dedicated to "my friend Malcolm Cowley," who is—

A poet, deemed to be, among all Americans, the best man available for an $8,000 job in the office of facts and figures, and an old political comrade of William Z. Foster and James W. Ford, who were, respectively, the presidential and vice presidential candidates of the Communist party. Comrade Ford, being a Negro, was selected as an incitation to civil commotion among the colored population, north and south, and Mr. Cowley, who, of course, is not a Communist, was a Communist, himself, inducted this ticket.

His Associates He also was a member of the national executive committee of the American League Against War and Fascism, whose directorate included Earl Browder, later chief of the Communist party and now a prisoner in Atlanta, and Clarence Hathaway, late editor of the "New York Times," Mr. Loeb's friend, Malcolm Cowley, poet and expert compiler of facts and figures at $8,000 a year, to be paid, in part, out of the income taxes of the 7,000,000 new eligibles in income brackets as low as $14.50 a week, later went along with the League Against War and Fascism, when, because of the excessive heat generated by the popular anti-Communist sentiment of the country, it changed its name to the American League for Peace and Democracy.

Even then, of course, Mr. Cowley was not a Communist, although there were Communists all about him and with him, nor had he succumbed when, in 1936, his name appeared on the list of sponsors of a banquet to Mother Ella Reeve Bloor, a well-known Communist relic, who, incidentally, has a son in the present government service, who, of course, is not a Communist himself.

Wrote for Sunday Worker Nor could you have called Mr. Cowley a Communist even when, in 1935, The Sunday Worker, the official organ in New York, advertised him as a contributing member of the staff, although you might have been tempted to this judgment had you known that the Worker commonly excludes nonmembers from its employ and asserts the right to censor all copy in the interest of the party.

Loose and idle talk about Communists, Communists, Communists is going to do no good whatever, except for Japan and Germany, by causing disunity on the home front where the noted author, Mr. Loeb, has revealed his great but unsuspected capacity for government powers over American business and Mr. Cowley, a poet by trade, surprises everyone by his indisposability as a fact-figure man at $8,000 a year.

But if you want to be a dirty Quisling and a disrupter, go ahead and read false meaning into past expressions of such patriotic men, so devoted to the capitalist system, under which, alone, in all the world, exist those freedoms for which this nation fights, impugn their old motives and their present matchless talents for government, and thereby help the enemy win the war.

Word Stories. By W. Worthington Wells. John Kieran, dean of the "Information, Please" radio program, in one of his reflective moments was talking about the title and well-known sports promoter, C. C. Pyle, and said: "His most famous undertakings were Red Grange and the 'Bunions Derbies.' The BULLBENT Mr. Pyle was lavish in every way, once he hit right and had a chance to expand."

EBULLIENT. Ebullient is an adjective pronounced e-BUL-lyent with the accent on the second syllable (bul), which is pronounced like (bul) in bulk. The third syllable (li) is pronounced like short (i) in it. Ebullient is used when referring to things which are bubbling, boiling, overflowing with enthusiasm, exhilaration or excitement.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL

X PLUS 2 EQUALS END OF WAR If Singapore falls you may set up an algebraic problem and discover about when the war will end.

If Singapore falls, as it appears it will, you may add a probable two years to the number of years it would take to win the war with Singapore held. Your problem then becomes X plus 2, with the result being the end of the war. I was never very good finding the elusive "X", but there is the problem. You may go to work on it.

Singapore is the most important port in the world.

Even with our own Pearl Harbor thinking, it still is possible for us to wonder why the British have tumbled this one. Billions have been spent on the defenses of Singapore. In the past two years $410,000,000 was spent in modernizing the defenses. They forgot the back door and the Wright brothers' invention.

Singapore, held by a strong enemy force, will be the key to the East Indies. Remember again that Singapore was the port through which passed: Ninety-seven per cent of the world's rubber supply.

Sixty per cent of the world's production of tin. Ten million metric tons of oil per year. Four million tons of sugar per year. (Industrial alcohol is vital for munitions.)

In addition, there came through the port large quantities of bauxite for aluminum, coconut oil for soaps and oils, some lead, copper, tea, tobacco, and enormous quantities of food. Indeed, it is estimated that 20 of the "must" items of war are cleared from that port.

They are assembled there from the islands about. It would seem impossible that England would have so failed in her planning and her thinking. It is difficult to understand even with our own example of Pearl Harbor.

We do know that, if Singapore falls, the war that day lengthens by at least two years, unless some new unknown and unsuspected factor should begin to fight on our side.

THE WRIGHT BROTHERS Another simple little algebraic problem will explain something else. If we let X represent the tremendous distances to the islands of the East Indies, and Y represent the lack of planes, we then have X plus Y explaining why the whole enormously rich section likely will fall into Japanese hands.

This means that Germany and her allies will hold an excess in raw materials.

Singapore's defenses were left open in the rear and there were no plans made for adequate staffing with planes. We never really thought we could hold the Philippines and have been surprised and rejoiced at the great fight being made there. England has been planning, since the war began, to hold Singapore at all costs.

England knew, as few people did, that the loss of Singapore would be a disaster as great, or greater, than was the fall of France.

It will make the war much more difficult. If by some miracle we could get ships and planes enough to hold Singapore and, by a greater miracle, the Philippines, the war would end much sooner. Indeed, with Japan out of the Pacific, the collapse of Japan would not be delayed more than a year.

That, as far as we know, is wishful thinking. The distances and the tremendous sweep of territory to be covered make it impossible to do the needed job. It requires five weeks in peacetime for a ship to reach Singapore.

I put this down not in complaint, or in bitterness, but merely to emphasize the war is a dangerous one; that it can be lost; that it can be won only by a great effort.

One can wish we had given more attention to the Wright brothers' product.

THE DOGS OF WAR Meanwhile, it is irritating to have that newspaper in the middle west its face smeared with red-ink patriotism and its heart still black and insincere, moaning we should not have helped England; that we will be in a horrible mess when war comes; that we may lose the peace, and so on. It hasn't changed.

In the senate three or four senators, Brooks, Clark, La Follette and Walsh, also whine and ask why we sent materials to England. Bennett Clark, of Missouri, who led the fight that kept Guam and the islands of the Pacific from being forfeited, piously asks what MacArthur thinks hearing Britain say she has American planes?

It ought to be obvious to a first-reader child that if we had not helped England she would have been long ago and we now would have no ally at all. The whole world would be against us. It ought to be equally as obvious to that newspaper, which has fled into patriotism, the last refuge of the scoundrel.

There is a big plan at work. There is one unsung battlefield of that war. No tanks roll on it. Food is the weapon.

We are sending food to French North Africa. We are sending some food to Vichy France.

We are sending some food and even some of our badly needed war supplies to Turkey.

We are sending some food to Spain and to Portugal. Not much. But a little.

Those four countries still are neutral. The same crowd moans about that, as if it were not necessary to gamble with a few tons of food to keep the Turkish army on the right side; to keep the French of North Africa friendly; to hold Spain out of the war as long as possible; to keep Portugal and Spain from open alliance with the enemy.

That fight with those four countries is a major one. We are at war and the weapons of war are many. Words, food, diplomacy often are as effective as weapons. The Dogs of War are many.

If we are awake, we will win. If we are not, we can lose. Any more large-scale "Pearl Harbor thinking" would beat us.

Another Letter From a Bald Headed Dad to His Red-Headed Daughter

By ROBERT QUILLEN

My Dear Louise: A famous New York surgeon, being complimented on his success, answered: "I do the operating, but God does the healing." Foch made a similar remark concerning his battles.

Check the great events of history—the ones that changed the course of history and the destiny of mankind—and try to imagine what the world would be like if things had turned out the other way. You will find abundant reason to believe that something more than chance determines the fate of nations.

Pick a few events at random, as they come to mind. There was a time when the Mohammedans seemed certain of conquering Europe. They swept over all opposition. If they had continued to win, their culture and religion would have controlled the continent and then spread to the Americas. But Charles Martel, better known as "The Hammer," stopped them at the gates of Vienna, and thus enabled our civilization to develop under the Cross. The most greedy and most brutal and destructive of all colonizers were the Spaniards. If they had been able to crush England, what is now the British Empire and the Commonwealth of Nations would be Spanish, and our country would be like South and Central America and Mexico. The storm that destroyed the Spanish fleet cleared the way for the building of our great nation.

Without Washington, America might still be a British possession, largely undeveloped, and vast sections of it might still be French and Spanish.

Without Lincoln, America might be two nations—or several—too weak to protect themselves from the greed of Europe.

I don't mean to say that God raises up great men or performs miracles to save ordinary people who will do nothing for themselves. It is true that He is always on the side that has the most cannon, but neither does He help those who cravenly whine for a miracle when they should be making their own.

People lose faith because they expect Him to be guided by their judgment. The self-righteous think He should help the "good"—meaning themselves; and they are outraged when He seems to use people they consider "bad." But if He used only good and perfect people to do His work, there might not be enough to handle the job.

Right and decency will triumph, if we do our part—but not if we are unworthy to survive. We needn't worry about His being on our side, provided we are on His side. Love, DAD.

"Hampton," said Banker Bredlove, "has been asleep for 25 years. But she's waking up. "Gosh," said a drowsy freshman to his pal. "I'm certainly glad we didn't enroll in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology."

Principal reason for the organization, it was explained, is to find a fellow with a sum of spending money, elect him president

It was further averred that to be eligible for a vice presidency one must agree to believe at least 20 per cent of anything any other vice president may say, a qualification that calls for extreme fortitude, not to say credulity.

Good Morning

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

JESUS CALLS DISCIPLES.

Sunday's lesson, Matthew 4:18-22, Mark 1:16-20, and Luke 5:1-11, is the interesting and revealing story of Jesus calling four men, two pairs of brothers, to become His disciples. The golden text: "Come ye after Me, and I will make you to become fishers of men." Mark 1:17.

It was during His Galilean ministry, following His return from Judea when Jesus made His first call to all-out discipleship. Passing along the shores of Galilee, perhaps in the suburbs of Capernaum, Jesus saw two ships, "standing by the lake." The fishermen had left the boat to wait their nets. Jesus entered one of the boats, belonging to one Simon, and called to the owner, asking him to thrust out a little from the land. And Jesus sat down in the boat and talked to the people, gathered along the shore.

When He had finished talking to the crowd, Jesus asked Simon to "launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught." Following the miraculous catch, Jesus said to the astonished group of experienced fishermen, including Simon, Andrew, James and John, "Fear not; from henceforth thou shalt catch men. And when they had brought their ships to land, they forsook all, and followed Him."

Now, let us look for a moment at the revealing incidents in this interesting event. Jesus commanded, they obeyed. That is the first important fact in this lesson. He commanded them and their boats. They yielded themselves and their possessions.

Next, Jesus revealed Himself as Lord of the universe in the miracle of the great draught of fishes in midday, confounding the skill of the experienced fishermen. That brought Simon to cry out, "Depart from me; for I am a sinful man, O Lord." Discipleship must rest upon acknowledged Lordship, requirements Jesus then called them to follow Him. We cannot be disciples unless we are willing to take up our cross and follow Him.

What did they give up—Simon, Andrew, James and John? They were successful, prosperous fishermen and merchants. They were doing very well, as the world accounts success and prosperity. They did give up something to follow Jesus.

What did they get—Simon, Andrew, James and John? They were charter members of the most influential group of men who have ever lived on this earth. Yesterday they were provincial fishermen along the shore of Galilee; today they are among the immortals.

They left all to follow Jesus. They discovered that in prompt response to His call to follow Him that they gained all things. Selah.

Floyd Lee Denied New Trial Plea

The state court of appeals yesterday denied a new trial plea filed by Floyd I. Lee, convicted of assault and battery in connection with a series of floggings near East Point in 1937 and 1938 and sentenced to four years on the public works.

Lee was indicted on six counts, but one was not pressed. A Fulton county jury convicted him on the other five. Judge E. E. Pomeroy granted him a new trial on count 4, but not on the others.

Since the judge had directed that these sentences on count 4 should run concurrently with count 2, his total sentence was unaffected. He was sentenced to 12 months on each count.

In his appeal Lee contended that the judge had no right to grant a new trial on one count and not on the others, but the court of appeals ruled that each count was properly treated as a separate case.

Democracy Now Paying Price Of Moral Ignorance, Dean Says

Education Has Neglected To Tutor Citizens in Obligations, Louisianan Tells Georgia Association of College.

Failure to teach the moral obligations that go hand in hand with knowledge stands as a serious indictment against the educational system of the democracies, Marten ten Hoor, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences of Tulane University, last night told the Association of Georgia Colleges, meeting in the Biltmore hotel.

"From the theoretical and technical standpoint, we have done a good job," he said, "but we have failed sadly to train our prospective citizens morally—to teach them how knowledge should be used."

Family Most Important. There are four agencies conducive to moral education, he declared. They are the family, the church, the school and society at large, with the family the most important.

"It is here the first understanding of trust and confidence is experienced," he said. "If missed in the family, it can never be fully realized."

A meeting at 9 o'clock this morning will be devoted to election of officers and a discussion of the part the colleges can play in the war emergency.

Junior Colleges Elect. President Anton Markert, of Augusta Junior College, was elected president of the Association of Junior Colleges of Georgia, which met yesterday afternoon.

Dean Fred Gunn, of West Georgia College, Carrollton, was named vice president, and R. A. Thorne, registrar of Emory Junior College, Oxford, was elected secretary-treasurer.

Captain Henry Robinson, former Agnes Scott mathematics professor now in charge of the classification section of the Fort McPherson reception center, was principal speaker at the afternoon meeting.

Emory Dean Attends Educational Session. Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

OXFORD, Ga., Jan. 30.—Dean George S. Roach, division executive of Emory Junior College at Oxford, is spending Friday and Saturday in Atlanta as a representative to the annual meet of the Georgia Association of Junior and Senior Colleges.

Much importance is attached to the meeting of the association this week in view of the fact that definite plans are expected to be outlined for the future operation of Georgia junior and senior colleges. It is practically assured that Emory Junior College at Oxford will go on a four-quarter basis, offering work this summer for the first time in many years.

Retailers Show 17 Per Cent Gain. Atlanta independent retailers showed an average gain in sales of 17 per cent last year over 1940, according to figures announced at Washington yesterday by the Census Bureau.

For the state, the sales increase was 19 per cent last year over 1940. For December, the gain was 11 per cent over the same month in 1940, while the year's increase reflected advances of 20 to 30 per cent recorded during the summer 1941.

As a group, the report said, cities of 2,500 to 5,000 population led all others in December, 1941, with a 25 per cent gain over the same month of 1940.

Asks Improvement In Health Centers

Declaring that "physicians would be justified in refusing to serve in some child health centers because of the inadequacy of quarters," Dr. Edgar H. Watson is advocating immediate rehabilitation of centers over the state.

Writing in the Georgia Medical Association Journal, Dr. Watson stated, "It seems ridiculous to teach hygiene in centers where the floors, walls, windows and other physical appearances are filthy. It seems foolish to attempt to examine children in dark rooms."

There are 300 centers scattered over the state, in cities and in rural sections.

Clyde-Mallory Lines Suspend All Service

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 30.—(AP)—Transfer of additional ships for use by the government has caused suspension of all service by the Clyde-Mallory Lines, effective within the next 10 days, George W. Bartlett, executive general agent of the line, said today.

Suspension of the Clyde-Mallory line brought to an end regular water transportation into and out of the port, and officials estimated some 800 longshoremen and clerical workers will be unemployed.

It's Workhouse Again

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Broadway Rose has wheeled her last quarter from a celebrity—for at least four months.

A Broadway character for years, living off the generosity of the great and near-great, she was sentenced today to the workhouse by Magistrate Morris Rothenberg who told her she was a "pestiferous panhandler."

Broadway Rose—whose true name she has given variously as Anna Dym and Anne Dyonne—was convicted Tuesday of disorderly conduct after she allegedly spat in a man's face. She served 30 days on a similar conviction last fall.

Two Atlantans Held in Beating Of Hall Farmer

Sheriff Bell Says Suspect Admits Attacking Guy McConnell.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.
GAINESVILLE, Ga., Jan. 30.—Thomas Emmett, 29, and Jesse Kalb, 32, both listed as Atlantans, are held in Hall county jail without bond in connection with an assault Thursday afternoon upon Guy McConnell, 66, well-known farmer and brother of R. Glenn McConnell, chairman of the county commission. McConnell is in Downey hospital with a fractured skull and his condition is considered critical.

Sheriff Arthur Bell said Emmett admitted to deputies that he beat McConnell over the head with a shotgun after he and Kalb had tied him up with strips of blanket. McConnell's pockets were turned inside out and his money, watch and knife were gone, the officer continued. The knife and a pistol belonging to McConnell were found on Emmett when he was arrested Thursday night in Forsyth county a few miles from the scene of the crime, Bell said.

McConnell, rallying briefly from unconsciousness Thursday night, declared "the two men tied me up and Emmett hit me twice with the shotgun," Sheriff Bell said.

Solicitor General G. Fred Kelley said Kalb told him Emmett had picked him up in Atlanta and after they reached McConnell's home forced him, at pistol point, to tie up McConnell. After they left in the car, which was allegedly stolen in Atlanta, Emmett beat him up with the pistol, saying "you know too much—dead men don't talk," Kelley quoted Kalb as saying.

Kalb was found near the car in an unconscious condition, Sheriff Bell said, and remained so two hours. Kelley said the crime would be a capital offense, whether McConnell lived or died.

Move to Repeal Legislators' Pension Bill

Rescinding Measures Introduced But No Early Action Seen.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Two bills to repeal a provision of a recent law which would permit members of the senate and house to receive retirement pensions have been introduced—but there is no prospect today that they would be acted upon soon.

The section was a rider to a measure which would increase both the contributions and retirement benefits of the thousands of civilian employees in the government.

Representative Wickersham, Democrat, Oklahoma, sponsor of one of the repealer bills, told the house that "very few members knew" that the congressional provision was "hidden in the bill."

"I wrote the President," he asserted, "asking him not to sign the bill, but to veto it. However, the bill has become law and I am introducing a bill to repeal this provision."

"This (provision) will cause you and me a lot of trouble. Taxes are high and the cost of living is increasing. I think it is a very inappropriate time for passage of such a bill."

Representative Hoffman, Republican, Michigan, who also introduced a repealer, said "many were caught napping" when the bill was passed in the house.

Auto Tag Deadline Not Yet Extended

No extension of the tag deadline was authorized yesterday by the Governor, although W. L. Joiner, director of the motor vehicle division, said only about half of the automobile owners in Georgia had made application for 1942 tags.

Technically, the deadline is midnight tonight, but it was predicted the chief executive would take some action today to extend the time.

Joiner said only 154,246 tags had been sold through Tuesday, although an additional 100,000 mail orders are in, but not filled. Last year's sales totaled approximately 585,000. The tag office will be open until 5 o'clock this afternoon.

Places were marked with lighted red candles and small flags.

Mrs. Reuben Garland asked the club to save used postage stamps, the dye being important to defense and the money from the sale of these stamps to go toward maintaining a hospital bed.

Child Welfare Report Reveals Results for Two-Year Term

When Mrs. Frank Neely turned over the reins of the presidency of the Child Welfare Association recently to Mrs. John Rutland, she closed a two-year period so rich in accomplishment that her colleagues were unanimous in tribute to her. She will serve as member of the executive committee of the association.

Mrs. Rutland comes into office after years of service to the association. She will be ably assisted by Mrs. Florence Clapp, president, Harold T. Patterson as treasurer, and by the continuation of Mrs. Herbert Elias as secretary.

A record of 585 children's applications handled in the past year was reported by Miss Florence Van Sicker, executive secretary. Of these, 355 were helped without being taken under direct care, 189 given minor service and 89 referred to other agencies; 77 old cases were advised; 77 investigations made for other agencies, and 230 children accepted for full care.

As 247 children were already under care at the beginning of the period, 477 children were given direct care in the past year. Of these 274 were placed in foster homes and schools.

The association made 34 placements for adoption of children under their care. Of 126 boarding homes considered, 26 were approved, and of 145 adoption homes considered, 65 were approved. Co-operating with Hillside, services were asked and given 16 children in Hillside, and the association placed 30 children there.

Mrs. Arthur Madison's report as chairman of the medical committee "revealed 91 clinics held, 678 visits to clinic, 204 individual children treated. In addition the staff doctors made 32 home visits and handled 225 office visits. Dental service was given to 95 children, hospitalization provided for 18 children, and immunization given 187 children, laboratory tests to 197, special examinations numbered 139.

Recommendations from the medical committee were a request for a full-time nurse and dental clinic, and an investigation into reasons Robert Brush, psychologist, who serves the agency on a part-time basis, presented case histories of some of the children under his care and reported the progress made in each case.

Mrs. Paul Potter reported $7,585 spent in scholarship for 45 boys and girls. Of 18 who were referred before the close of the year four have joined the United States Navy, four secured jobs and six have married. The agency now has seven of their boys in the armed service.

Joan Crawford Gets Lombard Role In Movie, "He Kissed the Bride"

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 30.—(INS) The big news today is that Joan Crawford has been chosen for the Carole Lombard role in "He Kissed the Bride"—and I say it is big news, not because so many top actresses were under consideration, but because this is no ordinary contract. Joan will receive $112,500 from Columbia for making this picture, and every cent of it will go to charity. Because of the manner in which she is dividing the money, the deal had to be taken up with the Treasury Department and okayed. She gives $50,000 to the Red Cross, $25,000 to the President's Infantile Paralysis Fund, $25,000 to the Motion Picture Relief Fund and $12,500 to the Navy relief.

Joan, who has been in New York for the last few months with her two children, heads back in a few days to start this comedy opposite Melvyn Douglas. Al Hall, the director, is set to go. Joan, of course, is under contract to M-G-M, but she was given permission to make this outside picture.

Rudy Vallee should worry that the Harvard Lampooners think that he is the "singer of the worst song of 1941." Tucked neatly in his sartorial pocket is a new, long-term Paramount contract launching him as an actor—and he doesn't want to. There were so many raves from the bosses after Rudy's debut as a character actor in "Palm Beach Story" with Claudette Colbert that they are rushing him into "Happy Go Lucky" with Mary Martin.

Brickbats or Bouquets—You really have to take off your hat to Vallee. He's been going good for 20 years—which is indeed a record. I hope the Lampooners can say as much for themselves 20 years from now.

A LINE OR TWO: Groucho Marx, in a satire on Sherlock Holmes, ought to be very funny, especially when written by those two past masters, George Kaufman and Moss Hart. You see that's the news about the latest of the Marx clan. . . . Miliza Korjus is in Mexico City making a musical screenplay for Miguel Contreras Torres, according to Paul Kohner. This should interest Genevieve Mitchell of Ephra, Pa., and her friends. . . . Pola Negri, who looks wonderful, is expected in Hollywood in 10 days.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD COLLECTED AT RANDOM: Eleanor Powell and Merrill Pye both say finish has been written to their romance, so I reckon it's true; Julie Warren and Conrad Nagel have been keeping the telephone busy; Natalie Thompson, a very pretty girl, and Bill Lundigan, are doing the movie shows together; June Knight and her husband, here from Texas, greeting pals at the Brown Derby; Anne Shirley is supposed to file her divorce suit this week. Meanwhile, she and the baby have moved into the Wayne house and John lived at the Walter Lungs up to the time he left for the east; Tony Martin, who is doing a recruiting job for the Navy, is in Hollywood on 24 hours' leave. He will sing "Anchors Aweigh" on the President's birthday broadcast; all shades of green and ankle length evening and cocktail dresses were the dominant notes in Howard Greer's spring collection. Gracie Allen sat in a ringside seat taking notes. Mrs. Bob Hope hurried over from her work for Uncle Sam; Sidney Kent, president of 20th Century-Fox, and Tom Connors, sales manager, in Hollywood for conferences with the local bosses. That's all today. See you tomorrow! But 11-year-old Carlotta Jelm says: "Buy bonds. Your Uncle has some tasks. He does not take—he all ways asks."

Mr. Ellis Gimbel has given two awards this year, one to go to a Philadelphia woman, and one to be awarded on a national scope. In Philadelphia they felt that Mrs. William Clothier had done an outstanding job for the community for more than 20 years, as a leader in civic and charitable undertakings, overseas and in this country. She certainly richly deserves the honor. Though she accepted it modestly, stating that she was but a symbol of those who state defense council, it is a well-known fact that those who are symbols have much to do with creating the things they symbolize.

The second award is the national award and is, as a rule, given to an individual, a woman who has stood out nationally in some way. But this year it was given to a family, an outstanding American family doing a job for the nation's defense. By good luck, the family's name is Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Jones and their four children.

So, even in their names they typify the everyday families all over this country who, in greater and lesser degree, are doing the same kind of job for the victory of our nation in this war. I hope that their recognition will give a lift to many other families in this country who, reading about them, will think: "Why, there we stand ourselves, and we are being recognized as essential to the winning of this war."

It is not just in their names that the Joneses resemble other people. To begin with, they are a farm family. The father runs a dairy farm, the mother has brought up four children and run a big house. Still, she had time to take part in the activities in her community and is a member of the defense council. The older son is a private in the Army, the two girls and the younger brother are all actually doing things which have a bearing on the war effort. It seems to me that Mr. Gimbel has a grand idea in honoring, through the recognition of a family group, the families all over the country who are making similar efforts.

This morning I talked with Dr. John Studebaker, of the Office of Education, and with many people in his office, on the conception of the job we all must do together in civilian defense.

MY DAY: Does Its Part

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, Thursday.—I had a snowy day yesterday and skidded around the Long Island roads, so that I really had some moments of apprehension when my daughter-in-law, Ethel, said: "Perhaps you will be snowed in and we can keep you here." However, I reached my departing train in ample time and was on time for my train connection in New York City and in Philadelphia.

A Reader Sends a Description Of a Saturday Night Bath

By Dr. William Brady.

What do you mean "no use for bathtubs anyway?" (she demands). Here I've been longing for a tub. What method have you that's easier than bathing in a tub? Shower bath or no bath at all? If you lived here and wanted to take a bath you'd find a fire in the kitchen stove, go out on the porch and pump water, carry the water in to fill the reservoir and tea-kettle, go out to get an armful of wood, then bring in the wash tub, step out after the mop, lay out your clean clothes, a bath mat, get a towel and wash cloth, go after a chair, hang some newspapers over the low windows, lock one outside door, dip the heated water into the tub, hurry out to porch to pump two more pailfuls to fill the reservoir again for the next bather, drag the woodbox against the porch door, set a chair against the other door into the dining room, slip off your clothes, step into the tub with both feet before you realize it is too hot, then paddle back to the water bucket for a dipperful of cold water, again put one foot gingerly in the tub, stir it around, and get in all over, if you are not too fat or rheumatic. If too fat or rheumatic you just stand up, like the Briton caught in his bath when the band played "God Save the King," or perhaps kneel and lave yourself as well as you can, making a ring of water on the floor around the tub. It was for this that you brought the mop, you see, and you use the mop to wipe up the floor before you step out of the tub. Then you step out, dry, dress, and if your back is weak you holler for someone to help carry your laundry and call "Next!"

I forgot to mention (continues the correspondent) that sometimes you forget the soap until you are in the tub and reach for it. Then you have to scramble out and across the cold linoleum after it. At the moment I can think of nothing I have omitted, but I haven't time to read this over carefully. It's Saturday and I've got to take a bath, so help me, (W. A.)

Ma'am, if I had a crowbar and an acetylene torch I'd gladly dig out a tub or two and send it or them to you. To the best of my knowledge nobody has used a tub around here since about 1934, except maybe young Bill who sometimes uses one for submarine maneuvers.

As a health adviser I have no use for bathtubs. But I have no objection to an occasional wet wash, if that is necessary, to remove dirt or grime. I do object to any suggestion that wallowing in a tub has anything to do with health. A shower bath takes up less space than a bathtub and is all the bathing equipment any well-regulated household requires. Bathtubs should be reserved exclusively for hospitals, sanitariums where some inmates are unable to get into or out of the bath unaided. A shower bath, no matter how simple or primitive, is easily more "sanitary" than any bathtub.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Matronly. I am 68, 67 inches tall, and have been 15 to 20 pounds overweight since my son was born last June. Before that my average weight was 145 to 148 pounds. How should I go about reducing without endangering my health or good looks (such as I have)?

(MRS. G. R.) Answer—Although you give no details of the distribution of the fat, I wonder whether your obesity may not be pituitary and call for some hormone injections by your physician.

Arthritis. I shall always be grateful for the suggestion I got from you about the use of massive doses of vitamin D for arthritis. The treatment simply worked wonders in my case—I am again back on the job and my doctor is now using it in several similar cases and getting excellent results in some of them. (M. B. H.)

Answer—Thank you. On request I am glad to send copy of the pamphlet on "Arthritis," if you inclose stamped envelope bearing your address.

Cryptic. I am taking advantage of this opportunity to congratulate you for your fearlessness in speaking out against reactionary M. D.'s. (HEALTH SERVICE.)

Answer—I have no idea what you mean, but I hope you refer to my efforts to expose quackery.

Today's Charm Tip. For the older woman: Keep a sharp and critical outlook for that tendency of age to droop, posturally speaking. Keep the chin up and all will be well.

POINTS FOR PARENTS

By Edythe Thomas Wallace.

This. Mother: "We're going to have guests for dinner tonight and I want you to say goodnight and go to bed when the clock strikes eight. And lights out at eight-thirty."

Not This. Mother: "I do hope you'll be good when the Jones are here for dinner tonight. Their children always behave so beautifully. I want them to think you are good children, too."

Planning definitely with children as to their behavior is more effective than many admonitions to "be good."

How To Handle a Snooty Mother-In-Law

By Dixie George.

I have been married almost two years. My mother-in-law has run my home, told me how to treat my husband; told me his likes and dislikes and as I am from a poor family, she has even thrown that in my face by saying "You're not in a class with our family." When I was at work, she came into my house and prowled around, cleaned it up, and would then tell me what she had to do. She has even told me that she never wants any babies in her family, and now that I am going to have one, she has treated me as if I didn't have any sense at all, and is trying in every way to discourage me.

My husband does not say a word, no matter what she says or does. I have tried every way I know of to get along with her, but it gets worse all the time. I have taken it all with a smile, but feel that I cannot take it much longer. I do not think my husband loves me, for if he did he would stand by me, don't you think? Please tell me what to do.

WORRIED WIFE. I think your husband loves you, but he has a poor way of showing it, if he allows his mother to treat you as you say. One must give the devil his dues, you know, so perhaps he is torn between his love for you and the duty he thinks is due his mother. Being poor is no disgrace, so do not let this other woman try to make you feel that you are below them in standing. From the way she is acting I think the shoe is on the other foot. It is too bad that you cannot tell her just what a different class she is in, and let her know just how little you regard her opinion.

I think for the present, that is, until after the baby comes, the best thing to do is to not pay any attention to what she says or does. Try, if possible, to avoid any contact with her. The more aloof you act, the more effect it will have upon her. As long as you are so submissive to her actions the more she is going to annoy you.

It might be a good idea to have a talk with your husband and see if he will be a bit more co-operative. Make him see your side of it by working on his sympathy. Tell him that the safety of yourself and the child depend upon his demanding that there be more cooperation in the household. Do not tell him as though you were afraid of what he might think or what his mother's reaction will be. Tell him as though his family were the poor one and not yours. Right now, the more you demand of him and his mother the better off you will be. After the baby comes, is when you can really put them on the spot and tell them what you think.

These same everyday foods also provide you with calcium, iron and phosphorus your system needs! Using just such common foods, the U. S. Bureau of Home Economics has laid out a basic diet as a guide in planning menus. It specifies one cooked leafy vegetable daily, one serving of poultry, fish or meat.

Slumping Wastes Valuable Energy

By Ida Jean Kain.

It's when your working hours are stretched to cover extra-career activities that you are forced to give posture its proper due. Slumping wastes the energy that might not be missed in the course of a normal eight-hour day. But as you take on more and more work the steady drain gets you down.

Of course, you don't keep your mind on your work and on a set of rules for sitting and standing while doing it. The technique has to be as automatic as shorthand or typing. But Madame Helena Rubinstein, who has been coaching leaders in civilian defense on posture efficiency, has found one simple rule to be immediately effective.

Here it is: Control the small of your back. When you sit in a chair or car, press the small of your back against the back of the seat. In standing, pull your hips down and under to get the same effect of pushing the small of the back out.

With the small of your back correctly controlled, your stomach is naturally pulled up and in where it belongs. You should never try to hold your stomach in. In the first place, you can't, and in the second, it is mechanically wrong and the attempt makes your hips stick out.

When you have the small of your back out instead of in and the hips under you, you will find yourself lifting your chest, straightening your shoulders easily, and carrying your chin level without further ado about rules. But to make sure that you are in good alignment without tension, occasionally turn your head from side to side. If you can swivel your head freely, Madame Rubinstein says you can be certain that your posture lineup is correct.

Get those ideas straight and you can begin this minute to cut down on the waste of energy caused by an inefficient posture.

But you should realize that a few daily calisthenics are a necessity. If you want to apply these posture correction choices, the stretching and limbering kind. Nothing is easier or better than simply lying on the back on the floor, knees flexed, feet close to buttocks, and pressing small of back against floor, then relaxing.

Or, you might like to stand your back against a wall, heels a few inches out, knees slightly flexed, press the small of the back and entire spine flat against wall, then droop trunk forward, still keeping back of hips against wall. Straighten up by rolling your spine up the wall. Both exercises give you a better sense of balance.

Tech Seeks First S.E.C. Victory Against Auburn Here Tonight

All in the Game

BY JACK TROY

Most Important The double play in baseball may be as important as having a good pitcher on the mound. For teams that were only fair in other departments have, through the long history of the game, been successful because of an ability to double up opponents on the bases.

Franklin P. Adams, famous columnist and a member of the cast of "Information Please," memorialized a famous double-play combination of the Chicago Cubs back around the turn of the century.

He resorted to poetry, as follows:
 "These are the saddest of possible words—
 Tinker to Evers to Chance.
 Trio of bearcats and fleeter than birds,
 Tinker to Evers to Chance.
 Thoughtlessly pricking our gonfalon bubble,
 Making a Giant hit into a double.
 Words that are weighty with nothing but trouble—
 Tinker to Evers to Chance."

This twin-killing trio of Chicago Cubs made history in the National League in the 1906-1910 era. Few probably recall who played third base. Well, it was Harry Steinfield. Later-day fans are inclined to remember only Joe Tinker, shortstop; Johnny Evers, second base, and Frank Chance, first base.

A great double play combination put the Cubs in four World Series between 1906 and 1910. They were in three consecutive series—1906-'07 and '08. It may be a slight contradiction of the accepted theories that pitchers win pennants.

Some Examples The Atlanta Crackers are hopeful of obtaining Charley Letchas, the Southern League's finest double play man. The deal may be closed soon. And going on the assumption that Letchas becomes a Cracker, the club's chances in 1942 will be boosted greatly.

Chattanooga won a pennant in 1939 largely through the twin-killing combination of Honeycutt, Letchas and Hooks. Letchas was the key man. Last year little Pat Ankenman was the key man as New Orleans led the league by a wide margin, and double plays kept the Pelicans in the first-division running. They surprised a lot of fans.

Now Ankenman is manager and the Pels have strengthened. They figure to make about as many double plays and to be fortified elsewhere. So they may become a pennant threat.

Atlanta fans recall that the last good combination assembled by the Crackers included Buster Chatham, Nig Lipscomb and Alex Hooks.

Since then the Crackers have won pennants without left-handed pitchers or double plays. The answer must be good management.

Still and all, there is nothing quite as effective in a team's defense as a twin killing. Unless it's a triple play. And nobody's ever been able to round up a combination that can make many of the latter.

In Short This corner regrets that a brief absence from the city prevents acceptance of Duddy Porter's generous invitation to demonstrate "How To Clean a Duck" at The Constitution Cooking School.

However, Howard Haire will demonstrate bicycle riding form (at its worst) in a great community Back-to-the-Cycle movement Sunday. Personally, the sports department is in the market for a horse and buggy.

Joe David, prominent New Orleans citizen and member of the Sugar Bowl committee, is a visitor in Atlanta. Mrs. Carling Dinkler Jr. is Mr. David's daughter and he is proud to be having friends call him "grandpa." It's a nine and one-quarter-pound girl. "House of David" parties is a famous Sugar Bowl feature.

Slightly inebriated caller requested a pass to an athletic event and I politely told him he would have to see one of the other boys as I had been away. "Pardon me," he said, "I didn't know you ARE out of town."

Those Atlanta Crackers are making a real contribution. In addition to their April Red Cross benefit game, President Earl Mann is turning over 50 dozen used baseballs for the boys in the camps. It is planned to send other baseballs from time to time during the season.

It would be tough to lose him, but Charlie Womack, the clever Cracker center, deserves a chance with a professional basketball team. Dutch Dehnert is certain to be impressed with the former House of David performer because he most certainly outshone the Celtics' Pelkington when they met. The Police Crackers, encouraged by their showing against the Celtics and the Eagles' treatment by the Celtics the other night, are confident of playing the world champions close Sunday afternoon at Sportsman L. C. Warren's Sports Arena.

'The Chief' To Have Operation

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.

Walter "The Chief" Ruark, star guard on Georgia's Orange Bowl football championship team and one of the best in the country, will undergo an operation on his right elbow this morning at the Crawford Long Infirmary.

Ruark was brought to Atlanta yesterday by Trainer Fitz Lutz for an examination, which showed a small chipped bone in the Georgia's third contest, but it didn't bother him the rest of the season.

The operation will mean that Coach J. V. Sikes will lose his only experienced baseball pitcher for the season. Ruark was his hurling mainstay last year but will be unable to play this season.

Head Coach Wally Butts and Assistant Quinton Lumpkin were also in town after a luncheon engagement at Dalton, Ga. They rushed back to Athens to attend the President's Birthday Ball.

Butts said Georgia would start spring practice Monday. About 48 men are expected to report but seniors won't be among them. Butts said the seniors are being excused for two or three weeks because they carried most of the burden during Georgia's march to the Orange Bowl.

"In fact," he grinned, "I may even excuse them for the entire practice because those reserves sure need a lot of work."

WALTER RUARK.

Purples Edge Lanier Poets In Close Game

Brooks Nets 10 Points in 19-14 Win Over Macon Quintet.

By CHARLIE ROBERTS.
 Defenses of Boys' High and Lanier quintets were tighter than the Scotchman who was down to his last 50-cent piece, and when the ball game was done the Atlanta Purple Hurricane had evened the series with the Macon outfit with a well-earned triumph, 19 to 14.

It happened last night at Grady court. It was one of the best basketball games of the year between two of the best high school fives in Georgia. And it left the Poets and the Hurricane with a victory apiece over the other.

So close and frenzied was the guarding of the two G. I. A. A. powerhouses that the invaders tallied a lone field goal in the first period and five points in the first half. The Atlantans managed only a single point, a charity throw by Castleberry during the entire third quarter. Dwight Keith's Hurricane, though leading almost throughout, was hard-pressed all the way and didn't sew up the game until only 25 seconds remained. The Purples held an 8-2 advantage at the first quarter, an 11-5 lead at halftime, but only a 12-11 advantage as the third quarter closed.

The whirlwind play of Purple Guard Charles Brooks, who was high-point man with 10 tallies, turned the tide. Six of his points found the hole in the last period, and twice he dashed in from nowhere to steal the ball and dash on for easy crisp shots. Those four points he stole were just short of the five-point victory margin.

Lester (Beapole) Hughes looped through six points for the Purple cause and was highly effective taking the spheroid off the enemy backboard. Clint Castleberry got the other three points, all free throws, and was the spearhead of the victor's attack, having the ball in his possession close to half the time. Dave Hambrick and Ray Echols turned in hustling floor games.

Only three Poets managed to score at all. Frog Dooley was the most serious threat and netted 8, more than half the Macon team's total. Gene Thurston and Lewis tallied 3 points each. Tall LaFayette King and Billy Brown turned in magnificent guarding games, with Brown holding Castleberry, the purple ace, to 3 points.

The lineup:
 BOYS' HI (19) Pos. LANIER (14)
 Hambrick (3) F. Thurston (3)
 Echols (2) G. Dooley (8)
 Hughes (10) C. King (8)

 Sub: Boys' High—D. Roberts, Brown, Rayle, Avery, Smith, Lanier, Crawford, Lewis (3), Nolan, Schwartz, Cobb.
 Officials: Dick Florrid and Ed Copeland.

Campbell Splits With Richardson

Campbell High of Fairburn put on the steam late in the final period to defeat the Richardson Rams, 21 to 17, on the Russell High court Thursday night after the Richardson girls had captured the opening tilt from the Campbell lassies, 36 to 29.

In the girls' contest, Campbell led, 17-14, at the half, but the winners took the lead early in the third quarter, mainly on the shooting of Mary Elizabeth Hall, who played the first half at guard. She bagged 16 points to take scoring honors for the game. Mary Morris dropped in 15 for the losers.

Grady Atkins, Ram center, netted seven points in the first half to give his team a 9-6 lead, but he was bottled up in the last semester and the Bears took the initiative. Stewart Sloan led the scorers with nine points.

Naval Base Trims National Battery

The Naval Base Quintet from Camp Gordon nosed out the National Battery five of Atlanta, 34 to 33, in a game last night at the Druid Hills High school gym. The hotly contested battle was won on a free throw by Tizal in the last 30 seconds of the game.

Jack Helmaa was high scorer for the winners with 15 points.

BEST-COACHED PLAYER—They call Jake Ahearne, big Detroit Eagle star, the most expertly coached basketball player in the world and his skillful performances strengthen such a rating. Ahearne was coached by Joe Lapchik, one of the Original Celtics, while attending St. Johns U. in Brooklyn. Now he is tutored by Dutch Dehnert, another Original Celtic. Ahearne and his mates will meet the Atlanta Crackers at Sports Arena Sunday afternoon, and wind up their 1942 invasion of Georgia with a Monday night performance at Woodruff Hall in Athens.

Dot Kirby Crushed, 6-5, By Youthful Tainter

Atlanta Six Down at Turn as High School Girl Wins Miami Tourney.

By DOROTHY KIRBY.
 MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 30.—Well, I came in runner-up for the second time in this Biltmore tournament. Last time it was Patty Berg. Today Georgia Tainter was too much for me, winning by a 6-and-5 score.

The only explanation I know of for losing is that it just wasn't my day. It's hard to say what happens to you when you play golf as I did in this match. It's true that Georgia was hitting her shots extra well, having a good 77 this morning to my not-so-good 83. This put me 6 down at the end of the first 18 holes. She was chipping and putting better than a pro.

While I wasn't as accurate as she was with my short game, it was one of those days when the ball wouldn't behave itself and too many times I hooked my drive in the cup and hit all around the edges of the cup, but just wouldn't fall.

I thought maybe the afternoon round would be a bit different, but it didn't seem to be in the cards that I should come out the victor. The only putt that I sank of any length was on the 11th this afternoon. It was about a 30-footer and it won the hole. I had just lost the 10th to a beautiful par which Georgia got after being in the trap on her second shot. This made me 6 down at the 11th, and I also won the 12th with a par 3, to be five down. I messed up the long 13th when I hooked my drive in the trap and lost the hole to a 5.

This was the first time that Georgia Tainter has played in this tournament. I would say she got off to a fine start. She received a $37.50 Defense Bond and the usual $100 prize for the winner and I received an $18.75 bonus, which wasn't bad for my poor effort.

I remember writing an article for a golf magazine some years ago and I stated that Georgia Tainter would be the golfer to beat in the near future, so my words really came home to me today. She is very steady and that, after all, is what wins golf matches for you. She is going to continue on the winter circuit and should take a few tournaments for herself.

However, I learned one thing that when it's not your day to win there is nothing that can be done about it but stay in there and take it. There has been an exhibition match arranged for the Red Cross at the Biltmore course, with Craig Wood and I teaming against Georgia Tainter and Ben Loving, the professional at the Biltmore.

They are making an effort to get Jack Oakie, the film star, to referee the match. He is down vacationing. So maybe I can play somewhat better for charity. I guess we will be leaving here on Monday for home.

Bob Thought Fight Was For 12 Heats

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(P)—Bob Pastor was a most surprised young man tonight when the announcer began collecting the tallies of the two judges and the referee at the conclusion of the 10th round of his fight with Lightweight Heavyweight Champion Gus Lesnevich.

Jimmy Johnston, his manager and known throughout the land for the frequency and freedom of his speech, had forgotten to tell him that the bout wasn't going 12 rounds as Bob had hoped. Pastor was an easy winner.

Prompt action is necessary in replying to the attractive offers in the Want Ad section of The Constitution.

Vandy Whips Georgia Quint Easily, 58-38

Bobby Moore Fires 23 Points; Olsen Gets 19.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 30.—(P)—Vanderbilt's cage quintet defeated Georgia tonight, 58 to 38, in a slow conference game here. It was Vandy's second triumph in six games, and the Georgians' fifth loss in six starts.

Georgia's Captain Bobby Moore took scoring honors for the evening with 23 points. Julian Olsen led the Vandy squad in baskets with 19 points, all but one of them from field goals.

The game was deadlocked seven times during the first 16 minutes, but late in the first half Olsen put Vandy ahead, 19-17, and they never lost the lead.

Guldahl Ties For Golf Lead In Crosby Meet

Joe Brown, Darkhorse, Also Shoots 68; Ray Mangrum Has 69.

RANCHO SANTA FE, Cal., Jan. 30.—(P)—Big Ralph Guldahl found his old-time prowess on the golf links today for the first time in many months and stroked himself into a tie for first place in the first day's firing of the $5,000 tournament staged by Singer Bing Crosby.

The two-time winner of the National Open championship fired a 32-36—68 in his opening bid for the Crosby title and wound up tied with a 31-year-old professional from Des Moines, Joe Brown, who posted a 33-35.

Guldahl and Brown dominated the play as the first half of the field of nearly 300 pros and amateurs teed off in this sixth annual event. The second half tees off tomorrow, and encompasses virtually all the big-name golfers—including the defending champion Sam Snead, Ben Hogan, Byron Nelson and their brethren touring shotmakers.

Leading scorers included: Ray Mangrum, Pittsburgh, 37-29—66; Ernest Mermer, Portland, Oregon, 32-34—66; George Schenier, Ogden, Utah, 37-33—70; Bill Nunn, Rancho Santa Fe, 35-36—71; Frank Rodia, San Diego, 36-35—71; Willie Goggin, White Plains, N. Y., 36-35—71; Chandler Harper, Portsmouth, Va., 37-35—72; Ernie Ball, Charlottesville, Va., 36-37—73; John Montague, Beverly Hills, 35-39—74.

Enright Is Ill; To Miss Drills

COLUMBIA, S. C., Jan. 30.—(P)—Rex Enright, head coach and athletic director of the University of South Carolina, was confined to a hospital today for the first time since he lugged the leather for Notre Dame more than 15 years ago.

The popular Gamecock mentor was admitted to the Columbia Hospital today to receive treatment for a throat infection. While his condition was not considered serious, it was expected to keep him from personally attending spring football practice scheduled to begin next week.

Enright came to South Carolina in 1938 from the University of Georgia.

Tigers Beaten Only One Time In Eight Games

Hawkins, Manci, Williams and Company Promise Jackets Trouble.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.
 Georgia Tech will be after its first Southeastern conference victory of the season tonight but the Jackets will really be in a battle before they get it, if one can judge by past performances.

Tech will take the court against the high-flying Auburn Tigers at 8 o'clock and one of the most thrilling battles of the season is expected. Ralph Jordan's lads have dropped only one game in eight starts this season and are tied for third place in the conference.

Included in their list of wins are two decisions over Vanderbilt and Spring Hill and one each over Sewanee, Mississippi State and Ole Miss. Tennessee's league-leading champions handed Auburn its only loss of the year.

Main reasons for the Tiger success are Shag Hawkins, Frank Manci and Frank Williams, three dead-eye sharpshooters who carry the burden of attack. Hawkins, generally considered the best center around, was the league's top scorer last season and has been doing great this year, despite a recent operation.

LEADS S. E. C.

Manci has the best scoring average in the loop, having scored 68 points in five games, a little better than 13 per cent.

Williams, a sophomore, has added all-around strength to the Tigers. Ineligible the first semester, this six-foot, 185-pound lad has returned to harness to star in the last three games.

These three, plus Guards Ben Park and Fagan Canzoneri or Marvin Motley, will form the Auburn starting five.

Coach Roy Mundorff's Jackets have won three and lost three, but have yet to capture a S. E. C. contest. However, improvement was noted in the team's play against Kentucky and Fort Benning and Tech fans are looking for a victory somewhere along the line. And tonight may be the fateful hour.

SOPHS SEE SERVICE.
 The Jacket sophomores, Jack Lance and Gene Snyder, have received valuable experience in the last pair of games and should be about ready to travel in the last conference game.

Jim Hearn and Captain Carlton Lewis at guards. The forward positions remain in doubt and likely will until game time. Mundorff has been juggling his starting five for a couple of weeks and hasn't yet hit upon a consistent combination.

The starting forwards will come from Snyder, Buck Stevens, Will Johnson and Hoyt Blackwell. The Auburn game will be the third from last for the Jackets on their home court. Only Chattanooga and Georgia will remain on the Atlanta schedule.

Bowling

Today's the day for the state doubles championship tournament, which will start in Columbus, Ga., at 1 p. m. and continue in shifts at 3, 5, 7 and 9 p. m. today and tomorrow. All of the star bowlers throughout the state eagerly look forward to their competition each year in this attractive event. As a rule, big prizes are not given in this event, because of the limited number of entries, but all of the best men and women bowlers will test their skill from scratch against each other.

Martha Cleveland and Ruth Jones, ladies' winners last year, and Joe Chambers and Ed Pearce, winning men's combination, will probably toe the line in a Saturday night or early Sunday afternoon shift.

Entries should be sent to Carlton Plant, Columbus Bowling Center, Columbus, Ga.

Burning up the alleys with a high game of 157, Burns, of the Central Office team in the Bell System League, led his team to a two-game win over the strong W. E. Company "A" team.

In a postponed Merchants League match, Shockley bounded in with a fine game of 152 and finished with a 379 set against Lee Jewelry team, thus enabling his team, the General Motors Parts, to win their only game.

State Said Lagging
In Health Field
A five-year test in two counties has convinced the Georgia Health Department that a vast amount of public health education is needed to improve the nutritional standards of the state.

The "fat back, gravy and bread diet" so lacking in calcium and phosphorus content, numerous physical defects among school children, and poor sanitation were found at the start of the work, said Dr. Abernethy, state health officer.

Improvement in some of these conditions in the two counties over the five-year period was reported by the director in a review of the work in the Journal of the Medical Association of Georgia.

"We might as well face the fact," he said in concluding the report, "that Georgians are not wholly a well-fed people. We cannot be a strong state unless all of our people have each day the kind of food that will promote abounding health and vitality."

Her Mother's Illness Brings Linda to Prairievale

INSTALLMENT XLVII.

As it was, Steve strode grimly into the apartment to find a telegram lying on the oval hall table. He tore it open, scanned it briefly, and then called to Linda:

"Yes?"

"It's—bad news for you, Steve said.

"Oh, no!" Steve saw her whiten as she read the brief message:

"Mother gravely ill. Suggest you come at once."

"Steve, what shall I do?" Linda lunged to him desperately, sobbing in his arms, not knowing how tenderly he held her, the expression in his eyes as he gazed down at the slim, shaking shoulders.

"I've been so cruel and thoughtless about mother . . . sometimes not writing for weeks at a time, and now—now—"

"Poor little girl!" he whispered gently. "Don't blame yourself for this. It's not your fault."

"But it is," she insisted. "It is. If only I'd been more considerate. Instead I waited until she was sick and needed me. Steve, I'm so selfish!"

She reached for Steve's handkerchief to wipe away the tears.

"You'll leave on the next train, of course," he said. "I'll make your reservations. Have Ellen pack your bags."

Linda yearned to ask Steve to accompany her to Prairievale. Even in her moment of distress she dreaded the homecoming, the whispers, the talk she was sure her trip would precipitate. Still, she felt she would not ask him to do so. It would be better to keep her chin up, to go alone.

Glancing down at her simple sports frock, she whispered: "I'll have to change to something more practical for traveling."

"You'd better hurry, then. I believe the train pulls out at nine, and it's after eight now."

The moment for which Steve had been waiting was past. Once again he was crisp and curt, as Linda fled to her bedroom to return, scant minutes later—calm and ready to face any emergency.

"I'm ready, Steve," she said quietly.

"Good." He took her bags. "Have your instructions for Ellen before you go?"

Linda took a long breath, glancing around the apartment as though she might never see it again. "No," she whispered. "I—rather leave now, quickly, before I lose courage."

"You'll never lose courage," he assured her gravely. "I'm very proud of you tonight, Linda, my dear."

In the station, the noisy, brightly-lit area with its crowds of hurrying, busy people, Linda waited beside smart piskin luggage while Steve purchased her tickets and wired her father that she was coming.

"The train is in, Steve," she said when he returned. "Perhaps I'd better get on."

"All right, Linda." So she didn't want him to be with her, even for a little while? He motioned a redcap to take her bags, and the boy hurried away before them. Pausing before her car, Linda turned swiftly to Steve, trying to smile with tears shining in her eyes.

"Would you like me to go with you?" he asked suddenly. "I will, if you want me to."

If only he would! Linda caught her breath, wanting to say yes, but then she knew he hadn't meant that. He was only trying to be helpful in her hour of anxiety.

"No, I believe I'd better go alone," she answered, heart-sick.

"You've been wonderful to me, all ready, Steve." Tears were beginning to course down her cheeks. "If it hadn't been for you—"

"I've not done half enough."

Linda stared at Steve's handsome, bronzed face filled with compassion as he looked down at her. Then, suddenly, she was sobbing, her arms around his neck.

"Steve—I'm afraid to go back. Terribly afraid!"

"Courage . . . courage, dear," he said gently. "She'll be all right. You'll see."

The sobbing subsided, and Linda relaxed wearily against him, oblivious of others in the station. Then, still holding her gently in his arms, Steve said huskily:

"There's something I've been waiting to say to you, Linda, for a long time."

Tear-filled eyes were lifted to his. "Yes?"

Steve hesitated. Was this the proper time, when Linda was beside herself with worry—when she was going to her mother's sickbed, to tell her that he loved her?

"It can wait," he decided aloud, smiling a little, "until you come home."

Home! Linda smiled wistfully. How good it sounded from Steve's lips. Their home! It thrilled and delighted her just to dwell on the thought, she was still smiling at him when Steve kissed her; caught her up hard against him and kissed her, until she was breathless and dizzy.

"Good-bye, Linda," he said, gently, releasing her. "Let me know if you need me."

He turned abruptly and left. Stars were in Linda's eyes, music in her heart as she clambered onto the train. Steve had kissed her! He had declared there was something he wished to say. With that knowledge, Linda was again strong and confident. Somehow everything would be all right!

Linda could not refrain from smiling at the irony of her return to Prairievale. Less than a year before she had been a shy, shabbily-dressed girl riding a dusty day coach to an uncertain destiny. Now, a wife of a celebrated novelist, dressed in the height of fashion, she returned—a visitor, summoned by illness.

As the train neared her destination, Linda peered anxiously from her drawing-room window to see her father waiting patiently on the station platform. With a final glance in the mirror to make sure her hat was set at the correct angle, Linda approached the door, waving at John Phillips.

"Dad," she said when she was in his arms. There was a lump in her throat. Her eyes misted with tears. "It's so good to see you again!"

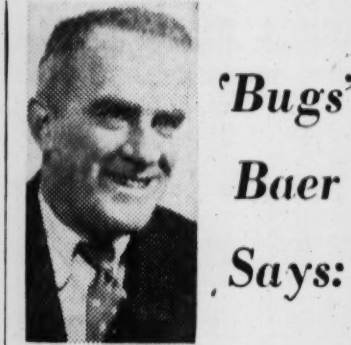

"My little girl," he answered huskily. "I was afraid you might not come."

"Is . . . is mother very ill?" Linda was half afraid to speak, afraid her father's answer might prove that her trip home had come too late.

"She's much better now," he replied. "The doctor said she was out of danger and getting along fine."

"I understood she was gravely ill," Linda was puzzled. "Your telegram—"

"We were afraid you might not want to come unless you thought

'Bugs' Baer Says:

They say no great song has come out of this war so it looks like "Over There" is ready for another heat.

That's a tune that will wind you up tighter than an idiot's watch.

Give them "Over There" for a marching song and "Dixie" for a fight. There are some tunes they are going to hear some day under den lindens.

It's our second trip this century and I don't want many more carelessness this time. The last Yank out of Europe in 1919 forgot to turn off the spigot.

It was urgent. He was placing her bags in the car.

Linda was weak with relief. "I guess I had that coming, Dad," she admitted. "I have neglected you, I'm afraid. I—I wanted to come home so many times, but I thought you might not want me."

"We—we've hoped you'd come for a long time now, honey," John Phillips cleared his throat. "We—we'll, we're sorry about everything. We didn't understand."

His voice trailed into silence. It was the closest to an apology that the proud, old man had ever come, and Linda was content.

There were tears in Mary Phillips eyes as she greeted her daughter; tears of weakness. Happiness! Linda tried futilely to swallow the strange lump in her throat. She had not known she could experience such happiness at her home-coming.

"You had me worried to death," she scolded when she could speak naturally. "Father said you nearly had a nervous breakdown."

"I'm feeling much better now," her mother answered, gazing at Linda's radiant face.

Hours later, seated at her mother's bedside, Linda attempted to explain her own marital mixup, knowing she could not reveal the whole truth to these simple middlewestern people whose lives had been so placid and devoid of treachery and intrigue.

"I—I thought I loved Greg," Linda admitted in reply to her mother's inquiry. "But after I met Steve, I knew he was the only man in the world for me. Steve was leaving to spend the winter on his farm, and I married him so I could go with him. It was sudden—surprising, I'll admit, but not a mistake."

It had been exactly like that, but no one hearing the lilt in the girl's confident young voice, or seeing the sparkle in her eyes, could doubt her present sincerity.

"Then—you are happy?" Mary Phillips asked anxiously.

Linda hesitated. She could not honestly say the last few months had been entirely happy ones, and yet, with the remembrance of Steve's arms around her and the tenderness in his eyes as they said good-bye still fresh and vivid in her mind, all the disappointment she had known seemed petty now.

"Of course I'm happy."

"You're not sorry—you left home and went to Chicago?"

A thousand times Linda had wished that she had stayed in Prairievale. "I would never have met Steve, had I stayed at home," she told her mother.

A Would-Be Defense Helper Demands His Swivel Chair

By Damon Runyon.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 30.—Communicative. No. 2 from the Broadway sector:

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Last night a guy by the name of Clabber comes to me and states that he is greatly astonished and also a little pained by the attitude of some people toward this war. He says that many of them are most unreasonable and that he sometimes wonders if there is any sense in him trying to do something for his country.

It seems that this Clabber goes to Washington and offers his services to the government for office work of some kind because he is really a curly wolf in an office and besides he does not wish to be drafted when they get to his age bracket and may have to become a fire warden as he is subject to colds in the head. Moreover, his ever-loving wife does not care to have him running around at night as she cannot always be sure where he will run to.

Well, it seems he takes letters with him from influential guys to quite a number of congressmen and also several senators and they tell him all right, he will get an office job but that he cannot get it at once because in the first place there is no office room left in Washington and that even if there is any left there are no more chairs for the offices.

Naturally, Clabber wishes to know why there are no more chairs and it comes out that it is because the airplane factories are nabbing the material used in making chairs and putting it in planes and the upshot is a chair shortage, although Clabber learns that shortly before his arrival it is just the other way around. The chairs are getting the material and everybody has a chair, especially in government offices and great happiness prevails.

Furthermore, Clabber says, some wonderful thinking is being done for the government as it seems that most guys in Washington do their best thinking in chairs, especially swivel chairs. But Clabber says, all of a sudden certain parties who have no idea of the importance of a chair to a guy in a government office takes to spreading the rumor that planes are of more importance than chairs and the next thing anybody knows someone sends it to the airplane factories.

"And now," Clabber says, "patriotic like myself who wish to serve the government in office work in Washington have no place to rest our hips. What the hell kind of a war is this, anyway?" he says.

Well, naturally, I sympathize deeply with Clabber in his predicament because he has plenty to put in a chair, if he has a chair to put it in, but he says his case is no more pathetic than that of many other guys in Washington. He says hundreds of them are wandering around there eager to sacrifice themselves to the services of their country in chairs, but are deprived of the opportunity because of this unreasonable idea that planes are more important than chairs.

"Why," Clabber says, "the chair shortage situation in Washington is becoming so acute that guys who already have chairs are taking them home with them at night for fear they will find someone else in them in the morning. They worry so much about losing their chairs that now even when they are occupying them they are unable to do their best thinking for the government. It is very sad," Clabber says.

Then he asks me what I think of the idea of organizing a few smart guys and going into the business of bootlegging chairs into Washington during the crisis. Clabber says such an organization can easily gather up a lot of chairs from beach and country houses which are closed up at this time of the year and take them to Washington and sell them for good prices, even though they may not be such chairs as are adapted to thinking.

Naturally, I spurn his idea at once and I tell him that if he does not like the way the war is being run he can write out his beef and send it to one of his blats to print and Clabber says, yes, he thinks of doing this, but fears the blats are already so full of beefs from their own columnists that they will have no space for outsiders.

Your Horoscope for Today

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Astrologist.

What today means to you if you were born between:

March 21st and April 19th (ARIES)—Before 1:03 p. m. holds conservative influences, favoring matters of substantial nature. After 1:03 p. m. radical changes or departure from ordinary proceedings should be guarded against.

April 20th and May 20th (TAURUS)—Previous to 1:30 noon favors affairs in general. Between 1:30 and 4:30 p. m. a general attitude of harmony surrounds your transaction. After 4:30 p. m. be careful of sharp speech, undue aggressiveness or overbearing.

May 21st and June 20th (GEMINI)—The period between 11:37 a. m. and 6:45 p. m. does not especially favor signing contracts for entering into new agreements. After 6:45 p. m. appears to be the better part of the day for entering into agreements and signing papers. The period past 7 p. m. favors romantic affairs.

June 21st and July 22nd (CANCER)—Before 10:41 a. m. you may be filled with a nervous energy, a desire to do things quickly, which can go into too much haste. Keep a careful check on your impulses. After 10:41 a. m. favors general business activities and seeking favors.

July 23rd and August 22nd (LEO)—Previous to 5:32 p. m. be careful that your hastiness does not overcome your better judgment. Your mental faculties are more active, which may lead you into hasty and impulsive actions. Exercise unusual caution today. The evening hours favor social affairs.

August 23rd and September 22nd (VIRGO)—An excellent day to contact clever and progressive people. A good day for putting into effect new plans that have been carefully thought out. The best aspects of the day operate previous to 4:10 p. m.

September 23rd and October 22nd (LIBRA)—The period previous to 1 p. m. favors matters of ordinary importance along domestic, business and personal lines. After 1 p. m. does not appear to favor new or important undertakings.

October 23rd and November 21st (SCORPIO)—The morning hours are such that may favor developments that require much activity. Benefits may be derived through correspondence, travel and general business.

November 22nd and December 21st (SAGITTARIUS)—An excellent day for financial interests, property interests, legal affairs, banking and investment interests. Impulsiveness is favored. New beginnings should develop with swift strides.

December 22nd and January 19th (CAPRICORN)—The influence predominating previous to 11:51 a. m. are such that may cause you to want to make changes, do things in a hurry, and possibly over-spend. Impulsiveness in judgment is not to be depended upon now. Better hold on to what you have and sit steady in the boat.

January 20th and February 18th (AQUARIUS)—During the entire day and until 3:27 p. m. financial efforts and actual finances may be wasted if you give in to a feeling of too lavish spending. After 3:27 p. m. favors romantic affairs.

February 19th and March 20th (PISCES)—Before 10:30 a. m. dramatic tempers may be in evidence, and the period does not favor seeking co-operation from those who have a determined outlook. After 10:30 a. m. favors general business, professional and educational interests.

Some weeks ago Maurice Evans, the famous Shakespearean actor, appeared on Eddie Cantor's program and, as a gag, read Harry von Zell's commercial:

"How would you like it," protested Harry, "if I started doing Shakespeare?"

"I wouldn't worry," answered the actor, "because you couldn't do it."

Last Tuesday night Evans received the following wire from Von Zell, which said: "Tonight I'm doing it. CBS, 9 p. m., EST."

And when Maurice Evans tuned in to CBS, he heard Harry von Zell read the "We, the People" commercial in Shakespearean style!

Weede To Sing 'Rigoletto' on WAGA Today

Bruna Castagna To Be Heard at Maddalena in 'Met' Show.

Robert Weede, Baltimore-born baritone, will make his Metropolitan Opera radio debut singing the title role in Verdi's opera "Rigoletto" over the Blue Network and WAGA today at 2 o'clock. Also featured in the cast will be Bruna Castagna, who will be making her first opera broadcast of the season as Maddalena.

Others in the cast include Bruno Landi as the Duke; Josephine Antonia Gilda, Nicola Moscona as Sparafucile; Thelma Votipka as Giovanna, and Lansing Hatfield, another young American singer who made his Metropolitan debut last month, as Monterone. Ettore Panizza will conduct.

Although "Rigoletto" was written in 40 days, nearly all critics concede it to be the greatest of Verdi's operas. The famous last act quartet is an enduring operatic classic.

In tribute to the home town of the featured star, the "Music in America" intermission feature will salute Baltimore.

On the "Opera Forum Quiz," guest experts will be Sir Thomas Beecham, noted British conductor; Olin Downes, music critic of the New York Times, and Dr. Sigmund Spaeth, musicologist.

The final intermission feature, "At Home With the Metropolitan Opera Guild," will feature Lily Pons, Met soprano; Antony Crispino, property manager of the Metropolitan, and Mrs. John DeWitt Feliz, editor of Opera News, in a discussion of "Happy and Tragic Endings in Opera."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(P)—The Communications Commission reported today that former Governor E. D. Rivers, of Georgia, had asked authority to increase the power of his radio station, WGCV, Valdosta, Ga., to one kilowatt, unlimited time.

This request amended a previous application in which he proposed to step up the station's power from 250 watts to 500 watts night and one kilowatt day.

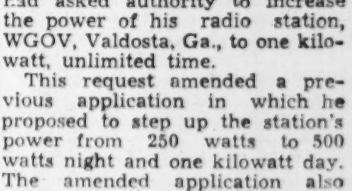

The amended application also asked authority to change the station's frequency from 1450 to 950 kilocycles and to install a directional antenna for night use.

As in the original application, Rivers sought a construction permit to install a new transmitter.
